NATIONAL AND REGIONAL NEWS

National Labour Market overview from ONS for October 2021

The most recent data show the labour market continuing to recover.

- The number of job vacancies in July to September 2021 was a record high of 1,102,000, an increase of 318,000 from its pre-pandemic (January to March 2020) level; this was the second consecutive month that the three-month average has risen over one million. All industry sectors were above or equal to their January to March 2020 pre-pandemic levels in July to September 2021, with Accommodation and food service activities increasing the most, by nearly 50,000 (59%).
- Unemployment is 1,510,000 down by 40,000 on last month's figures
- The ONS claimant figure for unemployed is 2,112,800 – down by 51,100 on last month.
- Youth unemployment (including students) is 498,000 and has fallen by 40,000 on the quarter.
- The number of vacancies Jul – Sep 2021 rose to 1,102,000 from the previous quarter (340,000).
- There are now 1.5 unemployed people per vacancy
- The employment rate is 75.3% (up by 0.1 percentage points on last month)

Hundreds of postal workers needed in lead up to Christmas

Hundreds of temporary posts are available with the Royal Mail across the UK, but particularly in London, as the build up to Christmas looms. A generous hourly pay is also on offer.

Demand for Tech professionals on the increase

Accenture has reported a demand for tech professionals in the UK increased by 10% over the first six months of 2021. There is also “significant” demand for skills in emerging technologies and jobs in quantum computing and blockchain.

Availability of workers falls

The REC Report on Jobs for data between August 12th to 24th found that the availability of workers fell at an ‘unprecedented’ rate with reasons such as employees deciding to switch roles due to the pandemic, fewer EU workers, furloughed staff and skill shortages.

Mrs Buckét recruiting

Cleaning company Mrs Buckét are hoping to recruit 100 employees across the South West.

The impact of AI on UK employment and the demand for skills

According to this report AI and related technologies should not cause mass technological unemployment, but the analysis suggests that they may well lead to significant changes in the structure of employment across occupations, sectors and regions of the UK. The effects may be relatively small over the next five years but could become more material over the next 10 - 20 years. Analysis also suggests that these technological changes may also add to income inequalities which may tend to favour people with higher education and skills levels, who also tend to have higher earnings levels.

As of 1st October, the Government's Coronavirus Job Retention Scheme came to an end. This was first announced in March 2020 and set to end in May of last year. It has since been extended several times, however, in the hopes it would prevent a spike in unemployment that would have otherwise been expected given the sharp economic downturn.

Cebr's May 2020 forecasts expected unemployment to peak at 3.3 million (9.6%). In reality, however, due partly to the extended furlough scheme, this proved less bleak than predicted with a peak of 1.8 million (5.2%).

Of the 225,000 expected to end up unemployed, most are predicted to be in the arts, entertainment and recreation industry or one of the lines of work falling under the 'other service activities' label which includes membership organisations, beauty services, repairs and cleaning. These are not the industries with the highest number of furloughed staff, but the ones with the greatest mismatch between the number of furloughed staff and vacancies.

The report available via the link depicts the number of vacancies in a given industry as a share of furloughed staff. While the two are not directly comparable due to other considerations such as location of the vacancy and occupation, this is a useful high-level measure of how easy it will be for those coming off of furlough to find a job within the same sector.

The government have pledged £500 million to expand the Plan for Jobs, announced last month, which is designed to support workers leaving the furlough scheme, unemployed people over 50 back into work, young people aged 16 - 24 on universal credit to benefit from the Kickstart Scheme (extended to March 2022) and help for those on the lowest wages.

Highest number of vacancies since 2001

Huge UK shortage of Registered Nurses

The Guardian reports on the number of nursing vacancies unfilled within the UK, revealing that there are around 39,000 vacancies for registered nurses. The government has set a target to increase the number of NHS nurses by 50,000 by 2025.

Care sector needs more people

Analysis from Skills for Care finds that the care sector has more jobs unfilled than before the pandemic, with over 100,000 posts to fill across the UK. Job retention is also proving to be a problem. The government are providing extra funding and planning a regular recruitment drive to counteract the issue.
